

Statement of Research Interests

Financial Development, Financial Inclusion, and Microfinance

John Karuitha

December 2022

Overview

My research interests span financial development, financial inclusion, microfinance (MF) and Fintech. Specifically, I examine the place of MF and Fintech in fostering financial development and inclusion in Africa. Noting that Africa is the continent with the highest incidence of financial exclusion, research into financial inclusion is critical in Africa's development, factoring in the SDG's and the Africa Union (AU) agenda 2063.

Research accomplishments

Current work

Future direction

Funding history and potential

How your research contributes to your field

Potential research and industrial collaborations

Requirements for laboratory equipment and space and other resources

The research statement should be technical, but should be intelligible to all members of the department, including those outside your sub-discipline. So keep the "big picture" in mind. The strongest research statements present a readable, compelling, and realistic research agenda that fits well with the needs, facilities, and goals of the department.